I. Incident Summary

A potent Nor'easter is racing along the eastern seaboard, bringing significant snowfall to the Commonwealth from Monday night through Tuesday. Lingering snow showers will continue through Wednesday. Much of the state is forecast to see over a foot of snowfall through Wednesday, with amounts near two feet in eastern PA. Strong winds will produce significant blowing snow Tuesday and Wednesday, which will create blizzard conditions and treacherous travel. Extensive travel delays are expected along with some utility outages and downed trees. Temperatures will remain below freezing for much of the snowstorm.
